第四部分 写作（共两节，满分 40 分）

第一节（满分 15 分）

One possible version:

Dear Wilson,

I was grieved/heartbroken to hear about the tension between your passion for football and your study. However, I believe that with proper time management, you can strike a balance between the two.

I suggest setting aside specific time for practice and homework, ensuring that you arrange your time efficiently. It's crucial to attach great importance to your studies, as they pave the way for realizing your ambitions.

In this way, you will be excellent in both academics and football. Then your parents and teachers will be more likely to understand and accept your hobby. I have faith in your ability to overcome this challenge and find a harmonious balance.

Yours,
Li Hua

第二节 （满分 25 分）

One possible version:

Paragraph 1:

With the help of her walking stick, she slowly made it to the bus stop. When she was struggling to get on the bus, a kid lent her a helping hand. Some kind passengers even offered their seats to her. She managed to sit down, so grateful for the assistance of the warm-hearted people. She also tried to feel the position of the seat and paid close attention to the announcements of the bus in case she missed her stop. As she stood up and was about to get off the bus, the driver said, “Susan, you’re very lucky.”

Paragraph 2:

She asked the driver, “Why do you say I’m very lucky?” The driver responded, “You know, your husband has been watching over you silently, with his eyes on you all the time. You are one lucky lady!” Tears of happiness poured down Susan’s cheeks. Indeed, she was so lucky, not only because of her caring husband who presented her with the gift of love, but also for the considerate strangers on the bus who brightened her day with kindness. At that moment, she realized that love and kindness had the power to light up even the darkest path.
